The Speakers

Craig Anderson

Craig is Library Director at RMIT University – a position he has held for more than five years. He has been responsible for a number of major projects and attracting an additional $7,000,000 in project funding. Craig previously was Chief Executive Office of Yarra Plenty Regional Library Service and is currently Board Chair for CAVAL Collaborative Solutions.

Neil Hinsch

Neil is the Outreach Team Leader, UNSW Library - a position he has held for two and a half years which aims to promote library services to the academy and HDRs and to build relationships with these user cohorts. Neil has worked in a variety of libraries over the years, including Reader Services Librarian (ACU), Ombudsman of NSW Librarian and Deputy Librarian, NSW Law Libraries.

Andrew Harrison

Andrew has been responsible for implementing an institutional repository at Monash University since 2003. As the lead institution of the ARROW Project, Andrew has been involved in many project facets, including development, testing and new content. Prior to this role Andrew established the Monash Lectures Online Service and the Readings & Reserve Digitisation Service.

Professor Julian Thomas

Julian Thomas is Director of the ISR, and also leads the ISR's Media and Communications program. His research interests are in new media, information policy and the history of communications technologies. Before coming to the ISR in 2000, he taught new media at RMIT, worked on the staff of the Productivity Commission's Broadcasting Inquiry, and was a senior researcher at the former Australian Key Centre for Cultural and Media Policy at Griffith University. His publications include studies of intellectual property issues relating to new media, the future of local content rules for Australian television, and computer skills in Australian schools. He is currently writing a book about music piracy and the internet.
